Environetics Named as Finalist in Los Angeles Business Journal's Best Places to Work in L.A. Competition

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 29, 2008 – Environetics (www.environetics.com), a full-service interior architectural design and space-planning firm providing workplace solutions, has been selected as a finalist in the Los Angeles Business Journal's Best Places to Work in L.A. awards competition. The annual event honors best places and best practices among local companies in three categories, small (15-24 employees), medium (25-249 employees), and large (250 employees or more).

“This recognition confirms that our focus on providing a workplace environment that encourages creativity, provides unique opportunities to excel and emphasizes a strong work-life balance is the right approach,” said Rodney Stone, president of Environetics.

Environetics participated in a thorough reporting process where Best Companies Group, a third party provider, identified the strengths and weaknesses of the workplace according to a detailed employee survey. The report was used to identify opportunities that exist within a company to build a better workplace and includes categories such as leadership and planning, corporate culture and communications, work environment, training and development, pay and benefits, and more. The finalists are selected based on the report findings.

In its 29th year of publication, the Los Angeles Business Journal is Los Angeles County's premier source for business news and analysis. Each week, the award-winning publication examines the many ways that the L.A. economy operates. First-rate editorial and research teams provide in-depth analyses of the community's ever-changing business and economic scene. A complete list of finalists is available at http://www.labusinessjournal.com/events/BP2W_Finalists.pdf.
